In an increasingly interconnected world, globally recognized education models like the International Baccalaureate (IB) are playing a pivotal role in shaping future leaders. As international mobility grows among professionals and families, schools that offer cross-cultural, globally focused curricula are rising in demand. This special feature will explore how international schools in North America, Asia, Europe and beyond are preparing students for success on a global stage.

- Proposed topic highlights:
- Internationally Recognized Standards: How IB and similar programs set students up for success in global higher education.
 - Cross-Cultural Classrooms: The value of learning in diverse environments that foster global citizenship.
 - Academic Pathways: How international schools support university admissions and long-term academic success.
 - Family Perspectives: Why globally mobile families choose international education for their children.
 - Learning Beyond Borders: Highlighting partnerships, student exchanges, and real-world global learning experiences.
